LINEARISMS

October 30 - 31 - November 1 2026

Linearisms

One experiences colour, but the eye follows line

Eight artists explore and create in the abstract, seeking to fully understand and master its unique grammar. Their central focus is the line itself. They make, perceive, repeat, and analyze it, then delete and redraw it. Although it doesn't create a referential narrative, it carries the work's full visual weight.

The exhibition treats the line as a field of exploratory possibilities, in a non-descriptive and self-sufficient way. Some artists work with measured, ruled marks that establish colored grid intervals and create repetitive visual systems. Others let the line follow the hand, so that pressure, pace, and the individual gesture define a virtual surface. Between these poles are lines that are cut, scratched, layered, or condensed until they become a texture, a high-density graphic pattern, and an architecture of their own. Their approaches are pluralistic and intermedial, often playing with how flat objects are presented within the space. The line is extruded and expanded into a sculptural hybrid drawing, handmade and tactile.

Linearism does not denote a single movement or style. It looks at one of art's oldest tools and asks what it can still do when freed from description. Across eight practices, the answer is a great deal. What emerges is a wide range of visual options, held together by the simplest element in the visual vocabulary, yet arguably the most important one.
